

Sandy Pines Wildlife Centre Internship Program 2017

Description

Spring and Summer are the busiest seasons for wildlife rehabilitation centers, including Sandy Pines Wildlife Centre (SPWC). During these months, we admit approximately 3300 wild mammals, birds and reptiles. The primary role of a wildlife centre intern is to help care for these animals, many of whom are orphans. The internship is intense, physically demanding, fast-paced and repetitive, giving interns the opportunity to learn about all aspects of wildlife rehabilitation.

techniques.

Interns gain valuable practical experience, while helping SPWC's wildlife patients and working with professional staff and volunteers. Some of the skills learned include; individual species identification and natural history, proper husbandry and enrichment techniques, animal handling, tube feeding of mammals and birds, medication administration, and various other procedures. Our internships are intended to provide on-the-job training in basic rehab skills, not to teach advanced veterinary theory or

We hope a working internship will help participants to examine wildlife career opportunities. In return, we expect to work with enthusiastic, mature, hard working people who will become an integral part of the working staff at SPWC during their internship. Interns may come from biology, wildlife management, veterinary medicine, veterinary technician or environmental education fields, but we will consider interns from any background. We believe that a strong interest in wildlife, enthusiasm and willingness to learn are more important than academic qualifications. We are offering a stipend of $100.00/week for the successful applicant.

We are located on a hobby farm in a rural area, with no public transportation. However, there are plenty of provincial parks and beautiful areas to explore all around us. Kingston and Belleville are within a half hour drive. Napanee has several restaurants a small movie theater and a limited shopping experience.

What Have Previous Interns said about their experience?

"During the summer of 2007, I was fortunate to be offered one of the four intern positions available at Sandy Pines Wildlife Centre for my second co-op work term. It gave me an amazing opportunity to work directly with animals and to witness first hand many of the characteristics and habits of species studied in biology programs. It afforded me the unique opportunity to literally try my hand at a unique type of work that I would otherwise have never tried."

Nikki Reshke- Biology Student from Ottawa University Co-Op Program

" I have had the chance to witness many veterinary procedures on all sorts of species from Great Horned Owls and Cooper's hawks to White Tail Deer and Painted Turtles. The internship gives you the chance to become involved with the medical side of rehabilitation also, and allows you to input your own opinions into the well-being of the animals you are caring for."

Laura Smith- BSc Animal Science: Behaviour and Welfare student from Plymouth University in Great Britain.

"I enjoyed my time as an intern at Sandy Pines... The hours were long and the work was tiring, but it was worth it for everything that I learned. Watching Sue and Leah at work and learning from them was a great experience. They both know so much and are such great teachers. Doing necropsies with Sue was always a highlight to my day because she explained what we saw in detail and speculated as to why the animal died and made us think. I learned how to properly evaluate an animal's condition, medicate it if necessary, feed it (including hand feeding and tube feeding), and make up an appropriate cage simulating its' natural environment.

Living with Sue and the other interns was an enjoyable experience. The meals were always great, as we took turns cooking! We got to enjoy T.V. shows together and discuss interesting cases that came in that day."

Steph Morgan- BSc Wildlife Biology Major, Honours, student from the University of Guelph

"I can most definitely say that this has been one of the most rewarding and challenging experiences in my life. It will be a summer that I will always remember and I have a lot of people to thank for that."

Lauren Ricer- Pre-Vet Program at Guelph University

"My last day at the centre, the hawk was released and it could not have been more perfect timing. When you see an animal recover from injury, it is difficult to express into words how amazing it feels to watch an animal bounce back from injury, then improve more every day and then are able to be released. There could not be a better feeling in this world."

Heidi Kulla- Completed 3 month Internship 2010

We have been running this program successfully for 12 years, giving 50 interns a once in a life time opportunity!
